GETTING AWAY WITH MURDER!

A JURY AT St Albans Crown Court sat impassively as 20-year-old Daniel Jethoo repeatedly plunged a two-foot Samurai sword into 23-year-old Bradley Knight in Waltham Cross High Street on December 21st last year.

They were watching close-circuit television footage of the attack and clearly heard Jethoo shout out, "I am the top nigger," as he slashed out at Mr Knight and his workmate Peter Matthais as they made their way home after their firm's Christmas meal at a local Chinese restaurant.

Bradley Knight died in Enfield hospital the next day while his colleague was treated for injuries to his heart, lungs, liver and hands after trying to grab the sword.

The jurors also witnessed clear pictures of Jethoo kicking and spitting onto Mr Knight's prostrate body as he lay dying in the street.

But despite seeing the crime committed before their very eyes, the jury found Daniel Jethoo not guilty of the murder and not guilty of the attempted murder of Peter Matthais.

Labour MP admits

Muslim

(see page two)

He was convicted on the lesser charge of manslaughter.

What on earth could have influenced 12 just and true men and women to disregard the evidence of their own eyes?

Jethoo's defence rested on the claim that he had been racially abused earlier in the evening. He had been called "a coon" and "a nigger" by people unknown and this had so upset him that he had gone home and returned to the scene of this abuse armed with his Samurai sword.

JETHOO: Found not guilty of murder because he had been racially abused

Bradley Knight and Peter Matthais just happened to be walking by when Jethoo returned and, although he had never seen or spoken to them before, he attacked them because he was so upset.

Apparently, according to the St Albans Crown Court jury, being verbally racially abused provides mitigating circumstances when butchering an innocent by-stander to death. So someone who has been racially abused cannot be held responsible for their actions, and the law will take into account this fact should they commit a crime.

It's a ruling that will be welcomed by the criminal classes amongst our ethnic minorities. No doubt, they will be suffering the effects of racial abuse when they commit their next crime.

Muslim gangs are out of control

GANGS OF VIOLENT Muslim youths in the north of England are out of control, and leading representatives of the Muslim communities are burying their heads in the sand and not acknowledging there is a problem.

"These gangs have no fear of the law as they assume their community's loyalty will protect them." That's the view of one Labour MP, Ann Cryer, who represents Keighley in West Yorkshire.

"They are escaping scot free because their elders are intimidated by them and fear for their own lives and those of their families."

ANN CRYER: Wants a firm response from the Government and community leaders.

Ann Cryer wants the problem of Muslim gangs to be met with a firm response to show youngsters within the community that these thugs should not be their role models.

But it appears that there won't be a firm response from the Crown Prosecution Service. It has been told by a team of Tony Blair's lawyers that fewer charges should be brought against members of the ethnic minorities who have been arrested, and the charges that are brought should sometimes be lighter.

An insider at the Crown Prosecution Service confirmed that there was already a 'softly softly' policy for ethnic minorities within the service. He told Freedom:

"We are under instructions to send back cases if we think the police have been heavy handed on defendants from the ethnic minorities. On last year's figures, one-in-five cases brought by the police against ethnic minority defendants were dropped by the CPS. The overall figure covering all defendants was nearer one-in-ten referred back.

"Ethnic minority defendants get an easier time in court as well, with judges and juries mindful of accusations of racism. I don't have exact figures but many more are acquitted at court than for the population as a whole." Mrs Cryer's warning came in a week when her government were forced to admit that the true level of crime is as much as 40% higher than official figures show. Record numbers of crimes are being left unsolved because of a lack of officers and a plummeting morale within the force.

BRIERFIELD: The victim was found lying in a pool of blood by this bridge

Racist attack or a fall from Mount Everest?

by Simon Bennett

AFTER a night's socialising in his pub in Brierfield, near Burnley, watching the England vs Argentina game, a local man in his thirties was attacked on his way home.

He was set upon by a gang of five men who had been, according to neighbours, cruising the area all evening in a car. It was a particularly cowardly and vicious attack, which left the victim with his leg broken in three places, broken ribs and numerous cuts and bruises all over his body.

The gang left him on the ground unconscious where he lost several pints of blood. By a stroke of luck he was discovered by a lady walking her dog at 5.00am.

It was her swift action in calling the emergency services that saved his life.

He remained in a coma for three days and doctors told police that his injuries were consistent with an attack by baseball bats and sticks.

Despite providing clear descriptions of his assailants, police were reluctant to conclude that the attack had a racial motive, or even that an attack had taken place. One officer on the case even suggested that the man might have had a fall.

When his doctor was told of this, he retorted:

"Then he must have fallen off Mount Everest!"

The victim remains in hospital and it will still be several weeks before he is released. Police have now arrested three men from Brierfield's Pakistani community, who have been released on police bail.

PAUL CHILTON: Needed forty pints of blood after he was hacked across his face

Axe attack on anglers

WARD END PARK: Now it's a no-go area for anglers and families

TWO ANGLERS are lucky to be alive after being attacked by a gang wielding an axe, a knife and cricket bats.

They were set upon while fishing with their families in Ward End Park, Birmingham on the first Sunday in July.

The victims, one aged 34 and from Bromford and the other a 28-year-old from Alum Rock, were attacked by a gang of Muslim youths aged between 15 and 20.

Horrified onlookers who witnessed the unprovoked attack called the police and an ambulance - but not before the men received blows to their heads and bodies.

One man had his head struck with the axe and the other received knife wounds to his arm, chest and shoulder.

The anglers, who asked not to be identified, were treated at Birmingham's Heartlands Hospital for their injuries.

Since the attack Ward End Park has been deserted with anglers deciding to go elsewhere or stay home. The weekend normally sees the park full of families as well as fisherman, but word of the attack seems to have got around and many are now treating it as a no-go area. West Midlands Police said: "This was a brutal attack which could have ended in a fatality."

They didn't know Deepdale was 'no-go'

THREE YOUNG friends were dragged from their car and savagely beaten, all because they tried to take a short cut home.

On June 30th, Steven, Darren and David, who were too frightened to give the local Evening Post their full names, were returning home to Preston, Lancashire after an evening out in Chorley. Driver Steven decided to take a short cut through the Deepdale area of the town and pulled up at a pedestrian crossing in St Mary's Street to let some people cross.

Suddenly their car was surrounded by a gang of youths, the doors were forced open and the three lads dragged out into the road and attacked.

Steven had his two front teeth knocked out while David was kicked unconscious. Darren was repeatedly punched in the face and left with boot marks all down his back.

Preston police, who are investigating the incident, told the boys' fathers that their sons shouldn't have been driving through Deepdale at that time of night because, "it is well known as a no-go area after dark".

Why Police morale is so low!

AN ELDERLY nun and ten other worshippers were attacked as they prayed at St Andrew's Catholic Church in Thornton Heath, South London in November 1999.

They were left with horrific injuries after Eden Strang, wearing no clothes at all and wielding a Samurai sword, burst in on the congregation. Fifty-one year-old Paul Chilton needed forty pints of blood to save his life after Strang repeatedly hacked at his face.

At his trial Strang was declared insane and ordered to be detained at a secure mental hospital. Now, after just 21 months in custody, psychiatrists have declared him fully recovered and he has been freed back into the community.

Strang's release highlighted why police morale is so low at present. One officer told Freedom:

"It's cases like this, and there are a multitude of them, that have made so many police officers disillusioned with their role in society. It seems that as fast as we put the criminals away to safeguard the public some bleeding heart liberal is on hand to release them."

Breakthrough!

Nick Griffin addresses the Radio Academy

CENTRE STAGE: Far from being denied a platform, BNP chairman was able to appeal directly to radio programmers and producers for fairer media treatment for our party

Nick Griffin was one of the guest speakers at the Radio Academy Festival held in Cambridge at the beginning of July.

He addressed the hierarchy of British radio programming in an "Issue of the Day" seminar, organised by Rod Liddle, Producer of BBC Radio Four's heavyweight morning news offering, 'The Today Programme'.

Ron Liddle told the audience that British radio had excluded rational debate about the British National Party from the airwaves and had demonised them under orders from the politically correct liberal lobby.

In his address, Nick Griffin asked for fairer treatment from radio producers for the BNP.

He cited 'the right of freedom of speech' that was enshrined in the British tradition and argued that it was wrong that individuals within the media, "many who had started off their political careers in the Socialist Workers Party (SWP)", were dictating what the public could and could not listen to on the radio.

Nick drew attention to the gulf that existed between those in government and the people which they served, giving several examples from that morning's newspapers of ways in which the liberal-left's cover-up of inconvenient facts was alienating the man in the street from those running the country.

Nick concluded his talk by thanking the Radio Academy for the opportunity of addressing its members and asking for 'a more even hand' when programme producers were covering the BNP.

The invitation to the BNP chairman from such an august body as the Radio Academy is a huge breakthrough for the British National Party. It shows that the 'No Platform' policy, once enforced so rigorously throughout the media, is now being questioned by a growing number within its ranks.

Thoughts on Immigration

*The British people were never given the chance to vote on whether they wanted Britain to become a 'multicultural' society.

*The British National Party is opposed to 'multiculturalism' because it fragments society and generates conflict.

*The British National Party seeks to protect and preserve the ethnic and cultural integrity of the British people.

*Labour and Conservative Governments, for the past thirty years, have allowed large scale immigration into Britain from the Third World against the clear wishes of the British people.

*Now leading population experts predict that the native British people will be a minority in our own country within 60 years.

*The British National Party will end immigration and the settlement of asylum seekers in Britain.

*The British National Party will encourage immigrants to return to their country of ethnic origin by providing generous financial incentives to help those who want to return home.

THE BURNLEY THREE: Union chiefs were demanding that Granada pull the plug on the TV debate on the riots.

They must not be heard!!

BOSSES of the TV unions were up in arms over the decision of Granada TV to broadcast a political programme featuring BNP councillors in a debate with opponents and an invited audience.

Granada TV asked the BNP councillors to appear as guests on their Friday political slot 'Granada Reports'. The programme was about the public's reaction to the disturbances in Burnley, Oldham and Bradford last summer. The Trades Union Congress asked for the programme to be pulled, saying that the BNP's views should not be allowed to be heard. But a spokesman for Granada TV said that it was essential to represent all views if an informed debate was to be achieved.

The BNP's Councillor Co-ordinator in Burnley, Simon Bennett, told the Lancashire Evening Telegraph, "As elected members, the three BNP councillors have a right to appear on television and express the viewpoint of the 10,000 people in Burnley who voted for them."

France now has the power over Britain

BRITAIN had better not upset the French government over their refusal to take British beef and lamb or they might literally pull the plug on us!

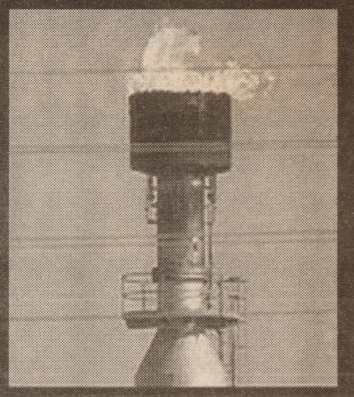

French state-owned power company EDF has just bought out Seaboard and is now our fifth biggest electricity supplier, providing power to 2 million homes in the south-east of England.

Welsh steel jobs go to Brazil

IT has now become clear why Corus, formerly British Steel but now an Anglo-Dutch concern, closed down its huge Ebbw Vale plant in South Wales last month and announced that it is shedding 6,050 British jobs over the next 12 months.

At the end of July, Corus revealed that it had bought into Brazilian Steel to take advantage of South America's lower production costs and cheap labour.

Don't sacrifice one British soldier for American oil

SADDAM: He's an American target because he threatened their oil supplies in Kuwait.

BRITISH TROOPS WILL soon be dying, fighting in America's war against Iraq. This is becoming ever clearer as preparations grow in Washington for an all out war and invasion, aimed at conquering Baghdad and toppling the Iraqi Government.

In any such war it is clear Tony Blair will send British troops to their deaths at the behest of President Bush.

British troops dying in faraway deserts might be a sad necessity if they were doing so in a fight to save European civilisation from the very real global menace of militant Islam. But that's not what they'll be doing. In being sent to overthrow Saddam Hussein, our troops will be fighting the least Islamic fundamentalist Government in the whole Arab Middle East. Saddam's Ba'ath (Renaissance) Party is a secular nationalist movement founded by a Lebanese Christian and enjoying the support of Iraq's ancient Chaldean Christian community. The Baghdad Government has long opposed the rule of the mullahs. Iraq never had anything to do with Osama bin Laden or al-Qaeda. Any terror training it may have done in recent years has been in response to the brutal sanctions imposed on the country by America, which have caused a massive increase in Iraqi infant mortality. If someone is killing your children, you may not be too particular as to who you help hit back at them. In contrast America turns a blind eye to the West's real enemy in the area, Saudi Arabia.

by Steve Johnson

It is Saudi Arabia, not Afghanistan and still less Iraq, which is the heart and wellspring of the Islamic war on the West.

Saudis, not Iraqis, set up al-Qaeda, with Saudi Government money. Most key al-Qaeda leaders, from bin Laden downward, are Saudis, including most of the 9/11 terrorists who attacked New York and Washington.

The Saudi sheikhs' regime is at this very moment bankrolling the fundamentalist anti-Western Islamic terrorists all around the world. In fact, everything America accuses Iraq of doing wrong, Saudi Arabia is doing worse!

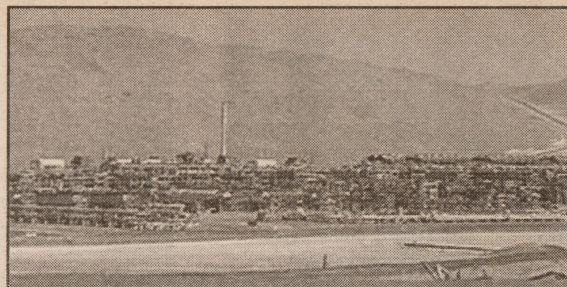

Except for one thing. The Saudi regime provides the oil on which the US has stupidly become dependent. When he moved into Kuwait, for centuries part of Iraq anyway, and toppled its corrupt al-Sabah sheikhs, Saddam Hussein threatened that US oil supply.

That is his real crime in the eyes of the White House. That is what British soldiers will be dying in the desert for – American oil, not Western freedom.

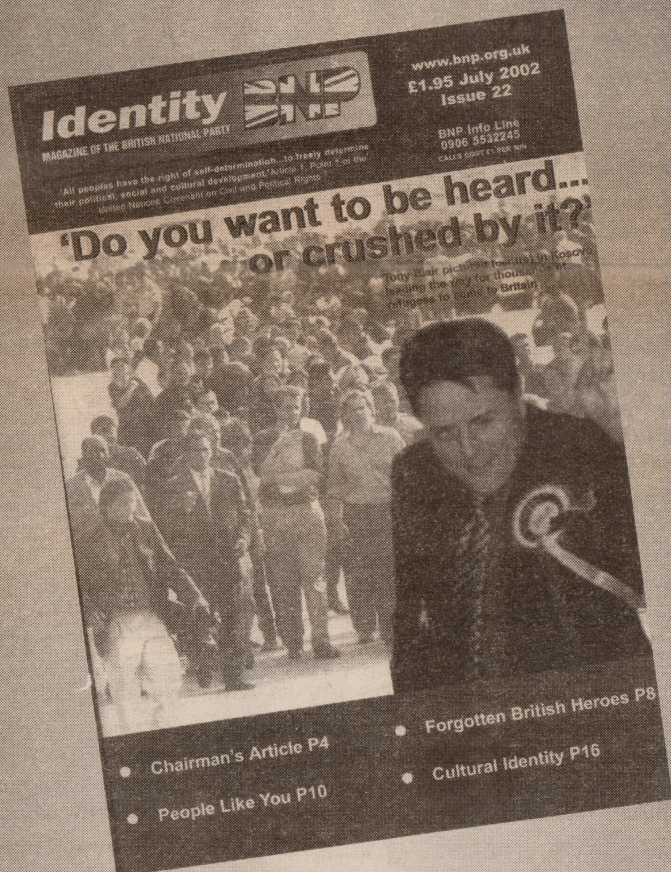

American oil, that is America's problem, not ours, and not worth a drop of British blood. If America wants to fight a real war against the Islamic menace, they should march on Riyadh, not Baghdad, and topple the sheikhs, not Saddam.

If Tony Blair wants to fight Islamic terrorism, he can do it nearer home still. Not by sending our soldiers to die in deserts thousands of miles away. But by sending our policemen to mosques in London, and Birmingham, and Bradford, and Burnley, where Britain-hating mullahs recruit terrorists to fight for Islam against our country, our freedom and our way of life.

The Saudi regime provides the oil on which the US has stupidly become dependent.

Raj on Britain

The thoughts of Rajinder Singh

TONY BLAIR has allowed thousands of mini Pakistans to take root here in Britain on a permanent basis, with all their mosques preaching external loyalties to the British Muslims.

Furthermore, there is never a breakdown in Home Office statistics of the Muslim males arriving in Britain every year from legal and illegal immigration.

New Labour and the Conservatives argue that they contribute to the workforce. What they do not tell us is that they are also changing the very ideological and spiritual basis of this country which has so far stood on the rock of Christianity.

But, alas, no more. That "rock" is dissolving faster than anyone realises. To me there seems to be a treacherous cover-up over this.

Mr. Blair will be long gone when the fires erupt, just as in other multi-cultural countries like the Philippines, Lebanon, Cyprus and the former Yugoslavia.

If two Christian communities cannot live in peace in Northern Ireland, may I ask, how will the Muslims and the Christians fit in well with each other in tomorrow's Great Britain?

I am afraid it won't be "Great" for much longer.

We should say to the World of Islam,

"For every one church you allow in Saudi Arabia, we will let you build two mosques here!"

Why should we accept a surrender any less than that?

I think at present we have a thousand mosques here for zero churches over there!

Done a bunker!

FORTY-seven out of forty-eight Nigerian 'golfers' registered to play at this year's Open Championship at Muirfield have gone missing.

The Royal & Ancient Golf Club said they thought it was strange that there had been such a high number entries from a country not famous for its golf.

Gay paedophilia is OK

THE book, Strange Boy, is the story of a 10 year-old schoolboy involved in a sexual relationship with a 14 year old boy. It contains explicit language throughout.

The book promotes homosexuality and is illegal under Section 28 of the 1998 Local Government Act, but that hasn't stopped Birmingham City Council from allowing it in schools.

An education department spokesman said they had no objections to the book being used in the city's schools.

Unions under threat from tinpot tyrants

SOVIET-style dictators are hell-bent on taking over Britain's trade union movement and forcing through illegal anti-British legislation in an effort to promote their out-dated and discredited philosophy. These tinpot tyrants who claim to represent Britain's workers are, in fact, only interested in resurrecting the past by adhering to an agenda laid down by the miniscule Revolutionary Marxist-Leninist Communist Party of Great Britain.

ASLEF General Secretary Mick Rix is a typical example. He recently bullied ASLEF into banning BNP members and supporters from the union. Freedom has been inundated by complaints from members of ASLEF over this action.

One delegate, who attended the Union's Scarborough conference, described the atmosphere.

"We kept our heads down when the BNP was discussed. Rix and his henchmen were glaring around the room daring anyone to voice any objection. When the motion was passed, they then threw in at the end that Conference would give £500 to the Socialist Workers' Party for their ANL scam. It was such a stitch up, you felt ashamed to be associated with the Union."

MICK RIX: This Soviet-style dictator is not only breaking the law but is discrediting ASLEF with his Marxist-Leninist agenda

The BNP's legal team is preparing to take on ASLEF over the exclusion of British National Party members from the Union, which is in breach of 1992 Trade Union legislation as well as the Human Rights Act 2000.

There are more Marxist-Leninist dinosaurs in UNISON North West and UNISON Yorkshire and Humberside.

The autocrats here are officials Cliff Williams, Diane Kelly and Wendy Nicholls who used valuable union funds to issue instructions to their members to vote against the British National Party in the May elections. This directive, issued on 24th April, detailed where BNP candidates were standing in the north of England and ordered its members to tactically vote to stop them getting elected.

The real face of this fifth column in our unions was exposed in a May Day march in Newcastle where Rix and his ilk from UNISON were joined by officials from Newcastle Trades Union Council and the Transport & General Workers Union. The event was organised by the Revolutionary Marxist-Leninist Communist Party of Great Britain. The main speaker at their rally in Exhibition Park was Mick Rix himself.

MAY DAY IN NEWCASTLE: A march organised by the Revolutionary Communists had ASLEF General Secretary Mick Rix as its main speaker.

Please help to keep the BNP moving forward

After the most fantastic election ever for British Nationalism, the British National Party is faced with a welcome problem - supporting our new councillors!

In addition, the party is seeking legal advice with regard to possible electoral fraud in Oldham and also in Burnley. On top of this, as the party is growing, more needs to be done - more travelling, more organising, bigger telephone bills and more postage.

Success in Burnley means that Burnley BNP needs a digital duplicator of its own. It has been agreed that the party nationally will find £1,000 for this if Burnley BNP can match it. Counsel's opinion on electoral fraud will also cost around £1,000.

£2,000 needs to be raised for the party's legal fund - something that needs to be built up to enable the BNP to aggressively pursue those who break the law in opposing our party. Many people forget that just to keep functioning day to day, the party needs money and £5,000 is being earmarked for general expenses, including the organising of new groups, to capitalise on our extra potential.

Lastly £3,000 is being set aside for security. The events in Holland are a timely reminder that we must always be on our guard.

The magnificent victory obtained in May will count for little if it is not followed up. Please send as much as you can afford to: The Treasurer, P.O. Box 16, York, YO61, 3YH. Cheques made payable to 'British National Party' or 'British Heritage'

EU wants to bury Britain under a tide of tyres

by Steve Johnson

AFTER the fridge mountain we reported in our last issue, the Brussels bureaucrats now want to bury Britain under a tyre mountain!

Under new EU rules to be imposed on our country from the beginning of next year, we will no longer be permitted to dispose of old tyres in landfill sites. Currently about 18 million tyres a year are disposed of in this way. From January these will start to pile up alongside the old fridge mountains already created by the Eurocrats.

There is a massive problem with illegal fly-tipping of old tyres. One illegal dump in Powys, Mid-Wales alone contains nine million old tyres. With nowhere to put them and insufficient capacity in expensive EU-approved disposal facilities, the tyre mountain will only get higher.

Many old tyres will simply be burned illegally, releasing filthy smoke and dangerous chemicals. Others will be heaped all over the British countryside by fly-tippers. Local council taxes will have to pay for clearing these up – but there will be nowhere Brussels will let the council refuse departments put them!

Britain has long been buried figuratively under a mountain of ever more absurd and bureaucratic petty rules and regulations endlessly flowing from Brussels. Now the EU is physically burying our country under mountains of rubbish it won't let us get rid of.

It's time to get out before we go under...

'Happy Hour' goes down the pole

EU bureaucrats have been busy during July changing the British way of life as much as they can. Facing the axe is the popular pub 'Happy Hour' with new Euro legislation decreeing that drinks must not be sold at less than they cost to produce. Also for the chop is the fireman's pole for swift access to their fire-engines. Euro-rules say this is now too dangerous despite being in existence in Britain for 200 years.

HOOKED ON DRUGS: It starts off with the odd joint and ends up with hard drug addiction

Cannabis is a gateway to death

THE reclassifying of cannabis from Class B to Class C has been greeted with great celebrations by the drug dealers who service the needs of Britain's 3 million cannabis users.

The Government has sent out a clear message that it doesn't care about people smoking cannabis, that the police will turn a blind eye to the use of 'soft drugs', and that the drug dealers can have control of the streets. At a time when we have more drug dealers than ever before and more than 5 million youngsters hooked on drugs, David Blunkett's relaxation of our drug laws is a monumental mistake. Cannabis is the gateway drug to crack cocaine. Last year there was an 8% rise in seizures of crack and police believe Britain is on the brink of a crime epidemic fuelled by the drug.

Both Labour and the Tories are guilty of promoting the liberalisation of drug laws. It's part of their 'politicising the police' experiment, started in the early eighties, where law and order issues are downgraded to accommodate the latest fads and trends of the liberal elite within society.

The downgrading of cannabis is not about allowing personal freedom, it's about manipulating law and order. It's tinkering with society's guidelines to curry favour with a tiny minority without regard for the consequences.

Cannabis provides a road to ruin for easily-led youngsters. It's not just the gateway to crack cocaine, it's the gateway to death.

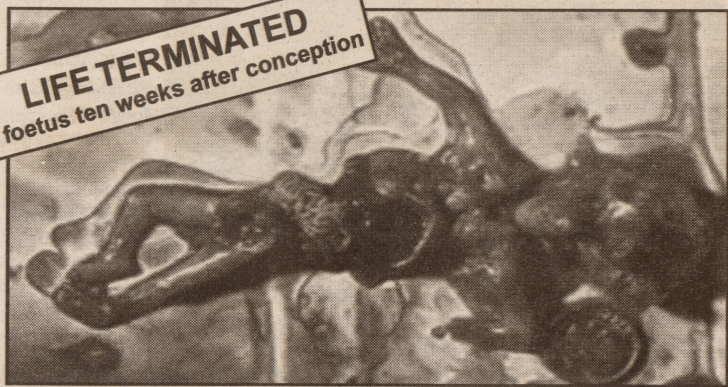

Making murder "less traumatic"

Tony Blair's Labour Government has moved to make the killing of unborn children 'less traumatic'.

It is offering women the abortion pill, RU486, in family planning clinics for the first time to "give faster access to terminations, making things quicker and less traumatic." Tablets are given two days apart and combine to induce a miscarriage and can be taken up to nine weeks after conception.

The move is designed to save money on anaesthetics and to make the termination process quicker, easier and cheaper. It's a shocking message

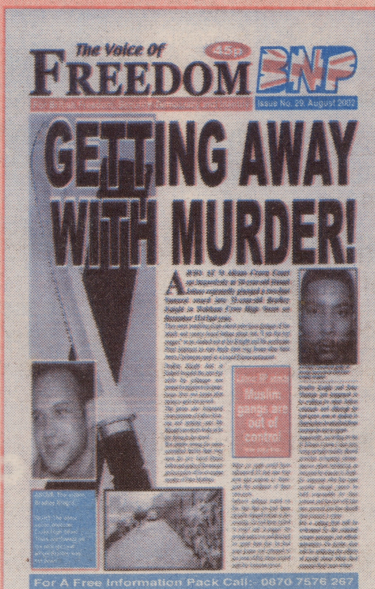

LIFE TERMINATED
A foetus ten weeks after conception for New Labour to be sending out, making having an abortion as easy as going to have your hair done. So while the Government sends money to the Third World to save the lives of their children, it is cutting costs and saving money by speeding up the killing of our children.

No sting for media scam

AT the end of July the BNP received an offer of a large sum of money from someone claiming to be a new supporter of the party.

This gentleman said that he wanted to remain anonymous because of his sensitive job, but promised to donate a significant amount of money to the BNP's Trafalgar Club.

Of course, due to new rulings from the Electoral Commission, accepting large anonymous donations is now illegal, and despite this being explained to the individual he said he still wanted to donate the money. He also insisted on handing the money over to the BNP Chairman or the National Treasurer in person. "Tell them to meet me at an arranged place and I'll hand you over an envelope full of cash," he told an astonished party worker.

JOHN BRAYSHAW: BNP Treasurer

Fortunately BNP Treasurer, John Brayshaw, has drilled it into all officials, at every level within the party, that no anonymous donations should be accepted. So this offer was politely refused.

The donation was clearly a ruse by a journalist seeking to smear the BNP. You can just imagine the headlines the next day: "BNP chief caught taking illegal donations."

Although there was no sting in the tail on this occasion, the failed entrapment should be a warning to all BNP officials and members; enticing us to break the financial restrictions imposed by the PPERA 2000 would be the easiest way for our opponents to close the BNP down.

Please remain vigilant at all times.

Carry on Carol

College resists Union intimidation

BURNLEY College principal, John Smith, is refusing to buckle under pressure from union leaders demanding that the college refuse to teach BNP councillor Carol Hughes.

Officials from Natfhe (The National Association of Teachers in Further and Higher Education) wrote to Mr Smith arguing that teaching a member of the BNP was at odds with the college mission statement to promote social cohesion.

Colin Gledhill, from Natfhe's north west regional office, said: "We are morally correct to oppose the right to education of a person who utters views which can only be seen as inflammatory in a multi-cultural society."

Natfhe's branch secretary at Burnley College, Peter Jones, said "If she was in my class I would refuse to teach her."

But, as is becoming more common these days, the union leaders were at odds with their membership.

After a meeting of the 160 Natfhe members at Burnley College, a call for a strike was rejected, and the lecturers who were teaching Mrs Hughes indicated they were happy to continue with the tuition.

Carol has been a part-time student at the College on a management studies course for the past two years.

Labour stunt branded a waste of council money!

THE Labour Party has been accused of wasting taxpayers money in a ham-fisted attempt to try to embarrass Burnley's three BNP councillors.

Tony Blair was said to have been personally involved in hatching a Labour motion for the council chamber. It was aimed at "exposing the BNP councillors" by applauding the stance of Burnley Football Club in banning people for life from matches for racist chanting.

But the whole scam backfired when it was slammed by local Conservative council leader, Peter Doyle, who accused Burnley Labour Party of wasting the council's scarce resources on a mindless publicity stunt.

In the end, the much-publicised council debate ended up a bit of a damp squid. David Edwards and Terry Grogan were joined by six other councillors in boycotting it, choosing to work on other council matters away from the chamber.

BURNLEY TOWN HALL: Carol Hughes braved the ANL demo

Carol Hughes, however, did brave the usual Anti Nazi League demonstration to listen to the debate, but chose to abstain when it came to the vote.

"It wasn't a sincere motion, but simply the Labour Party trying to have a dig at the BNP" she told the local TV, radio and newspaper reporters after the meeting.

These people are the REAL Nazis!

It's nearly sixty years since the demise of the totalitarian Nazi regime in Germany. Yet in Britain today, New Labour and the Unions are denying the right of freedom of speech to those they don't agree with, in the best traditions of the Brownshirts.

Adolf Hitler would have been proud of them. People like Labour MP, Ian Gibson, and Labour councillor, Eamonn Burgess, who incited a mob to march through the streets of Norwich to demonstrate outside a shop displaying political leaflets that they didn't agree with and wanted removed. Union bosses Colin Gledhill and Peter Jones of NATFHE for their efforts in trying to get part-time student Carol Hughes expelled from college for her political beliefs. In 2002 Colin Gledhill denounced Carol as having "a viewpoint inflammatory to the multi-cultural society". In 1933 people like Gledhill were also denouncing students for "a viewpoint inflammatory to the Third Reich."

Mick Rix of ASLEF would certainly be at home in pre-war Germany. His bully-boy tactics of denying membership of the union to people with inconvenient views would have drawn thunderous applause and a hail of stiff right arms at any Nazi rally. That would also apply to Cliff Williams, Diane Kelly and Wendy Nicholls of UNISON and their efforts to interfere in May's local council elections. Intimidating people on how to vote was all the rage back in the days of the 'Fatherland'.

Hitler made sure that his opponents never got anywhere near the media to offer voters an alternative message. He would have been nodding approvingly as TUC bosses battled to pull the plug on that Granada TV debate involving the three BNP councillors.

In Newcastle, today's Nazis intimidated DIY giant B&Q to sack BNP member Kevin Scott. His only 'crime' was that he had played a part in the democratic process by standing for election. Today's Nazis don't want that to be allowed. Back in Norwich, shopkeeper Malcolm Turner, who has faced a picket of his shop most weekends since March, summed up the behaviour of these REAL Nazis.

"I am amazed that in the new millennium there are still people who have no grasp of what the word democracy means and feel they can bully or frighten people into doing anything they do not agree with."

The legal department of the British National Party is busy protecting the rights of our members. The BNP will not be intimidated by these 'red' Nazis and will use every avenue available within our legal system to defend our individual freedom and democratic rights.

QUITE COMFORTABLE FACING THE CHALLENGE: Carol Hughes, one of Burnley's three BNP councillors, is enjoying the challenge of the council chamber. "I'm so pleased to be able to make the voice of the people of Rosegrove heard where it matters," she told Freedom.

Will the 'green lobby' grab the nettle?

I SEE that a Government advisor has revealed that if immigration continues at its current levels it will result in massive extra demand for new housing.

Professor Dave King, director of the Population and Housing Research Group at Anglia Polytechnic, estimates that

2.1 million more houses will be needed by 2021, on top of the 3 million or so already planned.

The overwhelming majority of these new homes will be built on precious Green Belt land. Huge tracts of the British countryside are set to vanish under bricks and mortar over the next 20 years. Despite this the usually vociferous environmental lobby remains strangely silent. The stark truth is that more immigration means less countryside. Will any of Britain's 'green lobbyists' care to grasp this politically-incorrect nettle?

William Fitt, Norwich.

Censorship in Scunthorpe

FOLLOWING the BNP's recent success in the Birmingham library censorship case, I would like to bring to your attention the fact that Scunthorpe library in Carlton Street is also suppressing information and views it does not want the public to see.

When I tried to take a look at the BNP website on the library's computer, I was told by a message on the screen that the pages I wished to view were "offensive" and that I had been "reported to the system administrator for trying to access them". For a comparison I tried the IRA/Sinn Fein website and got through without any problems. I did complain using a North Lincolnshire Library 'Comments Form', but needless to say that it has been ignored.

Thomas Bell, Scunthorpe.

This can't be right?

CONGRATULATIONS on this year's local elections. It is your policies, and the unfair policies of the other parties which has led to this swing amongst the public. People have become disillusioned seeing much of their money handed over to others while our own house is far from in order.

Just recently I had to sit by and watch my grandfather die in a nursing home. He started working down the mines at the age of 11 and stayed there all of his working life. But in order to get into the nursing home he had to sell his house and spend everything he had worked for and saved. The person next to him, however, lands over here from another country and gets the same treatment absolutely free. This can't be right?

I can see the headline

I HAD a laugh reading The Guardian the other week. It quoted the Labour council leader in Burnley saying the BNP councillors would be "watched like hawks" for any provocative behaviour. It's a crying shame no one was watching the 12 Labour councillors in Doncaster last year who were convicted of defrauding the public and misappropriating public funds. They were found guilty of taking bribes from building firms to build on Green Belt land, taking holiday cottages as gifts, going on a three day excursion (all expenses paid plus wives) to the Prix de la Arc de Triumph race meeting in Paris, and wasting hundreds of thousands of pounds of public money on lavish living and private helicopter flights. They were then, of course, forced into closing the town's old people's home through lack of cash. Still I'm sure when one of the BNP councillors in Burnley gets a parking ticket it will make the front page of the Daily Express. I can just see the headline now "Vile Nazis in clash with local police."

John Phillips, email letter.

Tough on criminals

IN your 'Where we Stand' column you rightly put crime at the top. Crime is the number one priority fear with the public and can help the party win elections if pressed home. People are tired of seeing criminals released after only serving half of their sentence. We need more prisons and more prison officers.

Jack Easton JP, Liverpool.

Needless suffering

I SHOULD like to bring to the attention of your readers the barbaric practice of halal ritual slaughter that is carried out in our country thousands of times each day.

I have tried to discuss this cutting of an animal's throat without pre-stunning with various animal rights' campaigners but none of them would be drawn on the subject. Political correctness obviously precludes them from demanding the outlawing of this very cruel method of killing.

The BNP must make the public more aware of the needless agony that animals are suffering because of the religious demands of Muslims living in Britain.

Whilst our indigenous slaughter houses are under ultra-strict control following the BSE and Foot & Mouth epidemics, halal slaughter houses are conveniently ignored.

Considering the great outcry against exporting live animals, and the campaign against fox-hunting, I'm sure that an anti-halal campaign promoted by your good selves would gain the BNP support from people you would never have dreamed of.

Adam Williams, Leytonstone.

Cuts in our fleet

YOUR report on Britain's fishing fleet was timely. The latest EU directive leaves Britain facing the largest proportional cuts in our fleet. Our fleet faces a 29% cut compared with just 11% for the Spanish. Now thousands more British fishermen will lose their jobs, and we will even lose the right to police our own waters. This loss is made worse by the refusal of the Blair government to compensate our fishermen for the days they are not allowed to fish, something which both Spain and France do.

Mike Napier, Grimsby.

SOARING house prices were widening the gulf between the North and South of Britain. A typical semi-detached in London had gone up by 26.8% in 12 months, or by £53 a day. Anyone moving from the North or the Midlands to work in London would need a pay rise of at least 25% simply to maintain their living standards. A survey found that the average house price in the capital cost five times the average salary, compared to double in the Midlands and the North.

OUR national stake in British offshore resources was given away by Margaret Thatcher's government when they created Britoil plc to replace the British National Oil Company (BNOC). The Petroleum and Submarine Pipelines Act of 1975 saw the BNOC acquire the licence held by the National Coal Board in the North Sea. It secured for the state a 51% holding, safeguarding the ownership of our country's oil reserves. When BNOC's holdings were transferred to Britoil, with shares sold to the public in 1982, that safeguard was lost forever. In 1988 Britoil was taken over by 'British' Petroleum.

FIFTY-six policemen were hurt after a riot in Lewisham in South London. A march, protesting against the rising tide of muggings in the London Borough, was attacked by supporters of the Socialist Workers Party. They then turned on the police. Smoke bombs, stones and amonia were thrown at officers and when the driver of a police van was injured, the crowd rounded on him chanting "kill, kill, kill." The rioters were driven back by police officers, who used riot shields for the first time on mainland Britain. David McNee, the Metropolitan Police commissioner, said the attacks on the police were planned and co-ordinated by the SWP.

Please remember 3rd of September

It's Merchant Navy Day!

The recent arrival of a salvaged German U-Boat to Birkenhead docks serves as a timely reminder of the losses suffered by our Merchant Navy fleet in keeping Britain's essential supply lines open during the Second World War, and the horrendous loss of life amongst these heroic crews.

Over 30,000 men of the British Merchant Navy were lost between 1939-1945.

For our Merchant sailors there was no initial phony war that the people of Britain lived through in those early days.

On September 3rd 1939, a few hours after war had been declared against Germany, the first shipping casualty occurred with the sinking of the Donaldson Line passenger ship, Athenia, and the loss of 112 passengers and crew.

For almost six years there was barely a day went by without the loss of merchant ships and their crews.

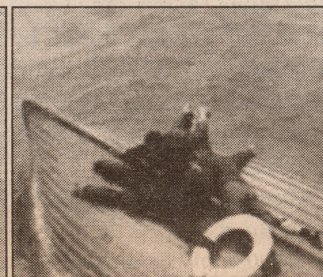

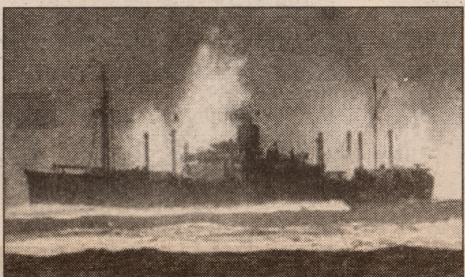

The gratitude owed to these men is finally being recognized with the introduction of the official 'Merchant Navy Day', designated the 3rd of September every year, the first one was held in September 2000.

Freedom asks all its readers to remember the 'Forgotten Fourth Service', those men of the British and Commonwealth Merchant Navy during W.W.II on Tuesday 3rd September.

Lest we forget those who made the ultimate sacrifice.

SEPTEMBER 3rd 1939: Within hours of war being declared the first shipping casualty occurred with the sinking of the Athenia and the loss of 112 passengers and crew.

Lost Innocence: Political Correctness is stealing their childhood.

by Diane Lynn

HAVE THE 'politically correct brigade' ever stopped to consider how their draconian philosophy is taking out all the fun and tradition out of childhood?

Children are always asking why some people have a different colour skin, to which I answer - for the sake of an easy class life for them - "because they belong in another country".

Recently my six-year-old asked me, "Why doesn't Father Christmas take presents to Rizwana Khawaja?"

I did my best to answer but after another day at school and another RE lesson, I now have a six year-old and her four year-old brother, who do not believe in the magic of Christmas. What a pity that they have been deprived so early of this childhood tradition. No doubt the Easter Bunny and the Tooth Fairy will follow shortly.

I believe that, with the insistence that ALL religions must be taught in schools, we are making a mockery of the whole idea of religion and faith. How can a child be taught, as every good Christian should, to believe in God the Father, Son and Holy Ghost, and that faith in them is our only salvation, when they are also told, "but this is only one of a number of options".

Through previous generations, facing war and deprivation, it was faith that got people through. Today children who suffer horrendous crimes have nowhere to turn. They haven't even that last resort of prayer to which so many children have turned in their hour of need in years gone by.

As a child I was encouraged to believe that Jesus was looking over me and would never let me down. I don't have any fixed religious beliefs but in an age when life offers so much danger and uncertainty for our youngsters, is it right for our educational system to go out of its way to remove our main symbol of hope and security?

I thought the saying "When in Rome..." would also mean when in Britain, but I was obviously mistaken. The politically correct brigade are denying our children their traditions, leaving one to wonder if we will be allowed, in the end, to hold on to anything British?

Britain is, and should always be, a predominantly Christian society. Let parents be allowed to bring up their children in a country of faith and hope and a feeling of well-being.

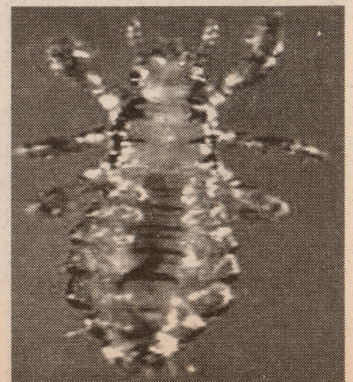

HAPPY CHRISTMAS: Thirty years ago Britain was more united with almost all children entering into the seasonal festivities

BNP speaks for the local people says Labour councillor

Charles Swift, Labour councillor for North Ward in Peterborough, has warned colleagues that the BNP is the only party talking about the concerns of local people.

"We have problems with begging, prostitution, crime and policing and the BNP are expressing people's opposition to these serious issues", he told the Peterborough Herald and Post.

"People are sick, fed-up and tired because they have no confidence in any of the parties. If there had been BNP candidates in Peterborough this May they would have polled the same votes as they did in Burnley."

Campaign against headlice

by Tess Culnane
Lewisham and Bromley BNP.

SINCE January I have been involved in a campaign to bring back the school nurse to tackle the growing problem of headlice in our schools.

The Sun and most London papers featured articles in support of this campaign and in February I appeared on Carlton TV's Citizen Guide to publicise the problems of headlice in our schools.

The nation-wide response was overwhelming, although I do need even more support to present a serious petition to the authorities. Although this scourge on society is reaching epidemic proportions the government are refusing to acknowledge there is a problem.

In 2002 our children should not have to endure this infestation that harks back to the Middle Ages. Our over-worked teachers haven't got time to play nurse, and are helpless in trying to stem the spread of headlice. They have to endure sitting in front of a class of children who are constantly scratching their heads during lessons.

How can we expect our children to pay attention and learn with these creatures crawling about in their hair - to ignore this issue is nothing short of child abuse.

Medication is expensive and does not always work and how do we know what harm continued use of the shampoo, containing chemicals strong enough to kill lice, will have on our children's health in later years.

Please support this campaign. For further information and details of web site call 0208 697 3923.

BNP Chairman causes a stir in Devon

NICK Griffin was the centre of attraction when he visited Devon at the end of June. The BNP chairman appeared on local television and radio as well as featuring prominently in the local newspapers.

It was all excellent publicity for the BNP and morale was sky-high amongst membership when energetic Devon BNP organiser, Tony North, introduced Nick to a 40-plus branch meeting in Newton Abbot.

TONY NORTH: The BNP's 'laid-back' organiser in Devon.

2000 VoF a month

THE Leicestershire & Rutland branch of the British National Party launched its campaign for next May's local council elections in its July bulletin. "Planning now will provide us with good results in ten months time", local official, Graham Eustace, told his membership. The branch has really blossomed over the last 2 years with 2,000 copies of Freedom now distributed each month, helping to provide a regular income of £200 for the branch. Membership has grown by 23% on 2001 and at their last meeting over 50 members and supporters attended, contributing to a collection of £330.

On Peter Hain's tail

THE South Wales branch of the British National Party has started leafletting Peter Hain's Neath constituency, drawing the attention of the voters to their MP's continued support for asylum seekers settling in Britain. Branch secretary, Vic Howard, met with 15 activists in Newport to get the leafletting campaign under way.

Mary Wills: Her courage played a crucial role in the success in Burnley IAM VOTING for the British National Party! That is how Mary Wills, aged 86, introduced herself to the electorate of Burnley in May of this year. She was one of a number of unsung heroes of the successful election effort in the town which led to three BNP councillors being elected.

Mary featured prominently in a glossy four page, full-colour A4 leaflet that was distributed in the last two weeks of the campaign. She felt it was important, if the BNP were to gain votes from her age group, that as a senior citizen she should explain why she was supporting the British National Party.

This is what the leaflet said, "Mary Wills was born in Laithe Street in Trinity ward on June 30th 1916, right in the middle of the First World War. She has lived in Burnley all her life and worked in the mill at the bottom of Ward Street, along with hundreds of others from her generation.

For more than eight decades Mary has watched life go by in Burnley, and although for most of that time 'things were hard', the community battled through together.

"After the last war things were particularly difficult", remembers Mary, "but we rolled up our sleeves and got on with living. You could rely on your neighbour because they cared just as much as you did about Burnley. They were Burnley folk, you see."

Mary is voting for the British National Party because she doesn't like what is happening to her town.

"In the last 20 years things have changed beyond recognition in Burnley. I'm just glad that my mother and father are not here to see it. The community spirit has been broken and people feel isolated and alone. You look around you where you live and think 'what has happened? I don't belong here anymore.'"

Mary reminisced during a walk around Towneley Hall. By the War Memorial she stopped and read the inscription.

"All those boys lost in the First World War wouldn't like Burnley as it is today. The men and women who died in the Second World War were fighting to defend Britain from invasion, to protect our way of life. 'I'm voting for the British National Party because it is what those who gave their lives in two world wars would be doing. They would be so upset to see what our town has become'."

Mary's contribution was a powerful message that struck a chord with many pensioners in the town. She had the courage to stand up and be counted and her efforts played a crucial role in the success of the BNP's campaign.

MARY WILLS AT BURNLEY WAR MEMORIAL: This photograph of Mary, in full colour, was featured in the election leaflet.

New members have their say in Bristol

by Michaela Mackenzie
Bristol & Western Counties BNP

WILTSHIRE organiser, Robert Baggs, chaired our meeting on 23rd June attended by over 60 members and supporters.

Bristol Organiser, Clive Courtney, gave an account of just one week's monitoring of the local press which included some depressing statistics related to drug-related crime in the city. On a more optimistic note he reported a significant increase in enquiries to Bristol BNP after the publicity of the party's election success in Burnley.

New member and environmentalist grower, Robert Baehr, outlined his reasons for leaving the Green Party to join the BNP. Robert voiced concern about the failure of all mainstream parties to stem the tide of immigration and the consequences this will eventually have on the environment.

Another new member, Peter Hunter, entrepreneur, aviator and novelist, then gave an account of his journey toward the BNP, recalling childhood memories of the Second World War and the sacrifices made to protect our identity, independence and sovereignty from the threat of invasion.

To Peter those sacrifices now seem pointless in the face of our membership of the European Union, and a criminal waste of the lives lost to secure our freedom.

Regional secretary, Clive Wakely, made an impassioned appeal for funds to contest next May's elections and the £500 collected was a record for a Bristol branch meeting.

Local letters page sets a new record!

FIVE letters supporting the BNP in one issue of a local paper? That's impossible you might think, but it happened on Friday 28th June.

It wasn't even in the Burnley Express or the Oldham Chronicle, but in Shrewsbury's Shropshire Star.

After the World Cup finals the local council told shops and pubs to take down all Union Jacks and bunting as its continued display could be construed as support for the British National Party.

When one shopkeeper was a little tardy in obeying instructions some members of the local Pakistani community took matters into their own hands and removed it themselves.

This action caused quite a stir in the normally quiet market town and led one letter-writer to observe.

"The BNP must be laughing all the way to seats on our council after behaviour like this"

Other writers thought the BNP were being badly treated in the paper with Estelle Brown writing,

"I was disgusted with recent insulting letters directed at BNP supporters. Both my husband and myself have voted for Labour for over 40 years until the last election when we realised the socialism we believed in had now been replaced by sleaze."

Wendy Slark of Oswestry also admitted her political thinking was changing,

"I have no quarrel with the BNP's strong support of the British way of life. I have no quarrel with their calling for British people who have paid forced insurance all their lives to have what is owed them. NHS treatment when they need it and care, as promised, from the cradle to the grave."

H. Watson of Meole Brace told the paper,

"Thousands of everyday people support and have voted for the BNP, proving the left-wing's stereotypical image of a BNP member and supporter does not exist."

This theme was echoed by P. Jones of Sundorne,

"For the record, nationalism does not equal racism. I am not a racist, nor are the BNP. The fact that they have worked with Sikhs and Hindus to tackle racism is proof of that."

The editor of the Shropshire Star is probably being hauled across the coals at this very moment for allowing such freedom of expression. Such publicised support for the BNP in a local paper is unheard of... unless you know better!!

RENT-A-MOB: These SWP/ANL thugs are usually on hand to do New Labour's bidding in opposing the British National Party.

The REAL face of New Labour

LABOUR thugs are waging a campaign of intimidation against a shop in Norwich which displays BNP policy documents in its window.

Ian Gibson, a former Socialist Workers Party (SWP) activist and now Labour MP for Norwich, joined with local Labour councillor Eamonn Burgess to lead a march to St Giles Street, where they gathered outside Malcolm Turner's antiques and jewellery store to protest about the BNP material displayed.

The 20-strong crowd, which included representatives of the Norwich Labour Party and the SWP's front organisation, ANL, shouted "smash the BNP" outside the shop.

A heavy police presence guarded the shop and prevented people from going in.

Despite warnings from officers about not trying to get into the shop, one man was arrested as he attempted to rip down the leaflets.

A defiant Mr Turner refused to be intimidated by the mob and told the watching media, "I am amazed that in the new millennium there are still people who have no grasp of what the word democracy means and feel they can bully or frighten people into doing anything they do not agree with."

He added that he was not a member of the BNP or a nazi and that the literature in his window included BNP articles about building on Green Belt land.

Muirfield: Beware meddlers at work

by Martin Wingfield

THERE WAS outrage within the politically correct brigade in the run-up to the British Open last month when it was revealed that the venue being used for Britain's most prestigious golf tournament, Muirfield, was a men-only golf club.

I was pleased to see Vivien Saunders, the former British women's golf champion, getting excellent media coverage for her "no dogs or women" tales from her 40 years on the professional golf circuit.

I worked for Vivien for two years back in the late nineties as manager of her Abbotsley Golf Club near Cambridge. It was a real eye-opener into the world of golf and the social division that exist in this closed environment.

Men golfers certainly don't like women golfers, but not as much as Seniors (older men golfers) dislike women golfers. For their part, women golfers don't like men golfers, and have outright hatred for Senior golfers. The only thing that unites all golfers is their contempt for non-golfers.

Vivien summed up the status quo in her article in The Guardian,

"I am not against all-male golf clubs. If the law was changed to outlaw single-sex clubs it would preclude women from having their own clubs and associations."

Her comments must have angered the liberal meddlers as much as Muirfield's men-only policy itself.

It's a day at the races with a difference

by Sue Langley

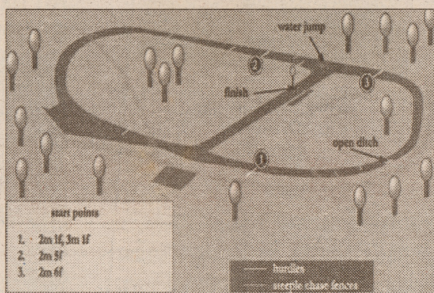

IF YOU'RE "cumin' t'up north" for the BNP's annual family gathering, why not stay on for another week and take in Cartmel races on Saturday 24th August and Monday 26th.

For me it's the best day out on the racing calendar and, like the RWB, it's a great family day out.

The village of Cartmel nestles in a valley on the southern edge of the Lake District. Access to this tiny course is by a mud track through a dense wood. For 360 days of the year the course is little more than a meadow beside the village, but on race days it takes on the mantle of a mini Cheltenham or Aintree with a lot more besides.

Racing has taken place on this site for hundreds of years, ever since the monks from the local priory raced their mules around the wooded parkland surrounding the village. Over the centuries racing became the highlight of an old medieval fair which attracted people on foot from hundreds of miles away.

Nowadays the festivities often start as early as 9.00am with a breakfast barbecue in the car park, followed by a light refreshment over lunch in one of the village pubs, only a stones throw from the course.

By early afternoon the atmosphere will be really buzzing, with 20,000 racegoers spread over every inch of the infield. A fairground will be going full tilt and if the bookmakers haven't taken all your money, there are market stalls, fast food stalls, sophisticated restaurants and plenty of bars and refreshment tents that will help you to have the time of your life.
